The Outlook

The Los Angeles Rams led the NFL last season not only in rushing yardage but in total offense, yet were able to finish only fourth in the Western Conference with a 6-6 record. The 49ers, on the other hand, allowed more yardage against them than any other team, yet finished in a first place tie.

One break in a game, seemingly insignificant at the time, can make or break a season for a contending club. The Rams ran 826 plays last season. One of them, a goal line fumble, eliminated a touchdown and a victory. Another, a dropped pass within a step of the goal line, had the same result. Had these two plays gone the other way, the Rams would have been undisputed division champs.

But, any other NFL team might have had its own two pivotal plays, which just points up the league balance.

What can be expected of the Rams in '58?

RETURNING VETERANS: Numerical depth is greatest at the linebacking and offensive halfback posts. Coach Sid Gillman finds thinness at fullback and defensive halfback.

LOSSES: With the absence of Norm Van Brocklin, Elroy Hirsch and Tank Younger, an aggregate of twenty-seven years of experience (9 per man) has been deducted. Billy Wade, an excellent understudy to Van Brocklin for four years, undoubtedly will take over at QB, but the replacement at end of Hirsch and the naming of Younger's successor as alternate to Joe Marconi at fullback are not clearly defined.

TRADES: In addition to future important draft choices, the Van Brocklin trade with the Eagles brings the Rams three year veteran offensive lineman Buck Lansford and sophomore defensive back Jimmy Harris.

TEAM AGE: This year's squad, in experience, may be the youngest in the club's history. Twenty-six rookies "made the club" in the three year span from '55 thru '57.

PROMISING ROOKIES: On paper, at least, the Rams have come up with another crop of top rookies including such collegiate stars as Kentucky's Lou Michaels, Jim Phillips of Auburn, Oklahoma's Clendon Thomas, Jack Morris of Oregon, Jim Jones of Washington, brilliant quarterbacks Frank Ryan of Rice and Bobby Cox of Minnesota, and John Baker, giant tackle from North Carolina College. This group, plus the inevitable "sleeper" from the low draft and free agent list, should provide the club with another solid influx of youthful talent.

OFFENSE: The Rams again charged to the finish wire in a grand offensive rush, scoring 79 points total in their last two games. Gillman astutely parlayed the league's strongest running game with the sparkling passing of Van Brocklin to produce these offensive fireworks and it remains to be seen if Wade can provide an equally effective aerial threat. The ground attack, however, should continue to flourish with Ron Waller and Tom Wilson providing tremendous ability at running half, and Joe Marconi coming on strong at

The Squad

ENDS: Offense: Despite the retirement of Ram all-time top men Elroy Hirsch and Bob Boyd, this department still includes top flight performers in Leon Clarke, Lamar Lundy, Jon Arnett and Del Shofner, with Arnett and Shofner moving over from offensive and defensive halfbacks, respectively, to help fill the gap.

"Returning rookie" Gene Mitcham, who sat out the league season last year with an injury, will be joined by Penn State's Jesse Arnelle and St. Ambrose's Clint Westemeyer in strong bids. Jim Phillips of Auburn, after the College All-Star game, is a definite candidate.

Defense: Tough, veteran four year starter Paul Miller may miss the 1958 season with a back injury which is not responding to treatment. If so, veteran Billy Ray Smith, and former offensive tackle Glenn Holtzman could be the starters. Rookie-wise, All-American tackle Lou Michaels of Kentucky is available, if needed, since he is considered a natural defensive end or linebacker.

TACKLES: Offense: Bob Fry and Ken Panfil are the returnees, with veteran Glenn Holtzman available if needed at his old spot. Buck Lansford, obtained from the Eagles, has had considerable NFL experience at this spot, though he is a natural guard, and can play either place. Of the rookies, the best challenge probably will come from Charlie Bradshaw of Baylor, 6-5 and 240.

Defense: Three seasoned veterans are back — Frank Fuller, Art Hauser and George Strugar, giving the Rams better-than-average strength at the position. However, no one is discounting the strong bid that could be made by John Baker, 6-6 and 290, from little North Carolina College. He is amazingly fast for his size. The question is whether he has had sufficient experience.

GUARDS: With the retirement of John Hock, Duane Putnam's running mate at this important pair of blocking positions might well be Lansford, giving the Rams as much strength as any team in the loop can show at guard. Putnam, of course, is everybody's All-Pro. A man likely to see action as an alternate, or possibly as a regular if Lansford moves to tackle, is John Houser of Redlands, last year's big surprise entry. Houser also can perform well at center.

CENTERS: This spot involves three men . . . Houser, Bob Griffin, the 1957 regular, and the 1956 starter Johnny Morrow, now back after a year in the military service. Like Houser, Griffin also performs at another position, having played linebacker for several Ram years.

LINEBACKERS: Seven strong candidates for three positions with four of them veterans plus a first draft choice rookie. That's the pleasant set of figures Gillman has to work with. An annual strength at middle linebacker, defensive signal-caller Les Richter is set for another of his usual tremendous seasons. Flanking him can be Larry Morris, Dick Daugherty and Jack Pardee, all returnees. In addition,

Lou Michaels, if not needed at end, will be pushing someone for his job. Bill Jobko, named by his teammates the most valuable player of the Ohio State Rose Bowl squad, will be making a strong bid, along with Clancy Osborne of Arizona State and East-West fame.

QUARTERBACKS: The QBs will be veteran Bill Wade and rookies Frank Ryan (Rice) and Bobby Cox (Minnesota). Wade has all the physical properties to be a great quarterback. His arm is as strong as Van Brocklin's. He is more elusive at evading the pass rush, and he's a greater threat as a runner. In the shadow of Van Brocklin, Wade for four years usually has been entering games under one of two conditions . . . either when the team was well ahead and the offense wasn't the regular unit, or when the team was behind and desperation tactics were required.

This year, Wade will have the normal first string responsibilities under normal conditions. He should do a top job.

Ryan, the nuclear physics student, has an amazingly strong arm and a fine collegiate record. Cox is an all-around talent. He can pass long, is a strong runner and possesses the leadership qualities required in a top quarterback.

OFFENSIVE HALFBACK: This might well be called the "best manned" spot on the team, with Tom Wilson and Ron Waller, recognized as two of the NFL's best, and as an alternate, end Jon Arnett, who will again see some backfield service following his sensational rookie year there. All three of these men have been league leaders in various departments of ground gaining and kick runbacks. No other league team can boast such a talented array of running backs. Two seasons ago, Wilson set the NFL record for yards gained in one game (223 . . . since broken). Waller, in 1955, set many rookie records, and Arnett's sensational 98-yard kickoff return last season was just one of many notable accomplishments for the former Trojan.

FULLBACK: Lacking experienced depth, this position nevertheless boasts a top man for its starter in Joe Marconi, whose powerful plunges, halfback speed and shiftiness, and above average receiving ability give him a versatility seldom found in fullbacks. Marconi's alternate likely will be chosen from among halfback Tom Wilson, defensive back Jimmy Jones, a top offensive performer at Washington; and Larry Morris, who has been a good emergency fullback.

DEFENSIVE HALFBACK: A combination of highly capable veterans and promising newcomers will be on display constantly in the defensive secondary. Deep men Will Sherman and Don Burroughs, two of the NFL's best, are back to take care of the safety positions, but their alternates and the corner men will, for the most part, be rookie assignments. Alex Bravo, following a good rookie season in '57, and Jim Harris, obtained from the Eagles, will be strong candidates, along with promising rookies Jack Morris of Oregon (the fastest man to hit camp since Bob Boyd eight years ago), Clendon Thomas of Oklahoma, Jimmy Jones of Washington, Jimmy Orr of Georgia, Floyd Iglehart of Wiley, Ed Kelley of Texas U. and the former All-American basketball star from San Francisco U., K. C. Jones.

Defensive halfback inevitably is the toughest pro position for a rookie to learn, since normally a player possessed of the necessary physical qualities has been an offensive star in college, with little chance to concentrate on the rigid requirements of pro defenses. As the Detroit Lions have shown many times, the team with the most effective defensive secondary has an immediate jump on the other clubs in the highly competitive battle for the divisional title.

Ram Coaching Staff

SID GILLMAN

Head Coach

In the National Football League today, player talent is so evenly balanced that each team possesses enough top personnel to win a divisional title any year or to defeat a given opponent any Sunday. Hence, one championship every six years is a team's fair measure of success. Yet with only three seasons behind him as the Ram mentor, Gillman already has claimed a Western Division title to add to his list of outstanding coaching achievements.

Gillman came to the Rams as the result of perhaps the greatest coaching hunt in football history. Employing the same thoroughness that guides their player talent scouting, the Rams in early 1955 meticulously screened every possible candidate. In the process, opinions of top football men were sought and considered. As the recommendations poured in, the suggestion invariably was the same:

"If you can, get Sid Gillman of the University of Cincinnati."

There were sound reasons for this unanimity. His Cincinnati teams had become near-perfect football machines. In one particular season they led the nation both offensively and defensively. He was recognized as one of the nation's top authorities on T-formation football. In short, he was a winning coach.

Today, after 24 years of coaching, including thirteen seasons as a head coach, his won-lost-tie record has reached a remarkable 104-36-3.

Gillman was born in Minneapolis in 1911 and entered Ohio State University in 1930. As a freshman he was an outstanding all-around athlete. He played end in the great tradition of All-Time All-American Wes Fesler (then a senior and later Gillman's end coach), and he was outstanding as a basketball player. In the spring, when he bypassed football practice to make the varsity baseball team as a hevy hitting infielder, he was sharply reminded that he was attending the University on a grid scholarship. His promising careers in two other sports gave way to a three-year concentration on books and football.

Gillman was All-Big Ten and Honorable Mention All-American during his varsity years 1931-33, and he played in two famous "first" games: The 1934 East-West Shrine inaugural and the College All-Star game the same year.

He served as Ohio State end coach in 1934, and the following year he played that position for the pre-NFL Cleveland Rams. Returning to the coaching ranks in 1936, Gillman's career through 1943 included assignments at Ohio State, Denison and Miami of Ohio.

After four years as head coach at Miami, and a single season under Earl Blaik as West Point line coach, Sid was named top man of Cincinnati's staff in 1949. The following six years saw him chalk up one of the nation's best coaching records: 50 wins and one tie in 64 games.

JACK FAULKNER

Backfield Coach

With the enthusiasm of a player and the wisdom of a coach, Jack Faulkner says, "Pass defense is the most challenging facet of pro football, and I love it." In the task of matching wits with the greatest offensive minds in the game, Jack says his toughest job is finding the right personnel. A candidate for Faulkner's secondary can be taught the basic premises of pass defense but must also possess the necessary physical properties—speed, reaction and intelligence.

Faulkner was an All-State center and linebacker at Youngstown high school before playing under Sid Gillman at Miami of Ohio. He joined Sid as line coach at Cincinnati in 1949, but became fascinated with pass defense, and was re-assigned to that phase of coaching. In 1951, UC's 33 interceptions led the nation.

Jack joined the Rams with Gillman in 1955 and since then has spent time every day contemplating the fearsome likes of Howton, Wilson, Hill, Owens and other phantoms who devastate NFL defenses.

JOE MADRO

Line Coach

The 1957 league leading performance of the Ram rushing game was a great tribute to the offensive line and its coach, Joe Madro. Culminating three years of effort, Madro last season saw his hard-charging blockers give the swift and powerful LA backs the holes they needed to become the best set of ball carriers in the NFL.

A proven success on offense, Madro's talents this year will be devoted exclusively to the development and efficiency of the defensive line. A new challenge, but one at which Joe will no doubt achieve similar success.

A native of Cleveland, Madro played three years at Ohio State and began his coaching career there under Francis Schmidt. In 1941, he became associated with Sid Gillman at Denison. In 1947 at Miami of Ohio he re-joined Gillman and has been with him ever since.

LOU RYMKUS

Line Coach

Coach Sid Gillman is hoping the winning ways of Lou Rymkus prove to be contagious.

As a tackle on Frank Leahy's famous 1941 Notre Dame crew, Rymkus and his teammates didn't lose a game. In 1943, he played with the Washington Redskins, Eastern Division champs. From 1946 through 1951, Rymkus played with the Browns and during those years Cleveland won a total of 11 divisional and league titles. The presence of this big tackle in any lineup no doubt was a big step in that team's ability to win football games.

With six years of line coaching experience, two in Canada and four with the Green Bay Packers, Rymkus brings to the Rams as offensive line coach the background of a great playing career plus established coaching ability. And what's more, from his playing days he brings the habit of winning.

BILL SWIACKI
End Coach

Making his bow in 1958 as a Ram Coach, Bill Swiacki brings to Los Angeles nine years of highly respected identity with pro football.

Following his famous touchdown pass reception that upset Army, 21-20, in 1947, the Columbia University All-American proved in the NFL that his college headlines were deserving ones. He was a brilliant end with the Giants and Lions from 1948 through 1952. When an injury ended his playing days, he spent a year as an end coach with each of these teams, then moved to Toronto for two years as head coach.

Swiacki began his college career at Holy Cross, then transferred to Columbia after returning from his World War II assignment as an Air Force navigator.

BOB WATERFIELD
Quarterback Coach

"Mr. Ram" is back again, but in a sense he's never been away. Bob Waterfield, following his retirement at the end of the 1952 season, has followed the fortunes of the Rams as closely as if he were still active as one of the all-time great quarterbacks in NFL history.

When Bob was a Ram rookie in 1945, he had the benefit of specialized coaching from Bob Snyder, a master T-formation ball handling and place kicking. Already talented in both departments, Waterfield found Snyder's special tutoring added insurance of NFL success, and his rookie year with the Rams was one of the finest in league history. Now, football history repeats itself. Waterfield, a master of the T-formation's quarterback requirements, and himself Bob Snyder's successor as an all-time field goal expert will impart his specialized knowledge to both Ram quarterbacks and place kickers.

EDDIE KOTAL
Director of Player Scouting

In charge of the Rams' extensive player scouting department, Eddie Kotal has been connected with the club since 1946. He attended the University of Illinois in 1921 and then switched to Lawrence College, from which he graduated in 1925. Kotal joined the Green Bay Packers as a halfback in 1925 and played pro ball for five years, being a member of the Packers' first world championship team in 1929.

Eddie was head coach at Lawrence in 1930 and then shifted to Wisconsin State Teachers where he was head coach and athletic director from 1932 to 1942. He was backfield coach and head scout for the Packers from 1943 until joining the Rams.

Ram Biographies

ENDS

Jesse Arnelle 6-5 230 24 1 Penn State

A prime candidate for "slot back" duties, Arnelle will report to the Rams this summer after an extended service stint. Spent a few weeks in camp last summer, but added service requirements precluded his staying with the squad. Played professional basketball this winter in the NBA following his discharge. Great speed and mobility to go with his size. One of Penn State's all-time greats in both football and basketball.

Leon Clarke 6-4 230 25 3 So. California

Based on physical ability alone, Leon Clarke is the ideal pro football end. He has plenty of blazing speed (finishing third in the NCAA low hurdles in 1955, after winning the PCC title in the same event) and large, sure hands with the always desirable "glue fingers." Add his size and ruggedness and you have a receiver who can go on to gain valuable added yardage after catching the pass. And the same ruggedness gives him the blasting ability to block desired of an offensive lineman. Clarke's performances have lived up to these physical potentials. In his rookie year he caught 36 passes, tenth high in the NFL, and last season, in spite of the fact that a painful injury kept him out of several games, he caught 23, four for touchdowns. Leon's post-collegiate honors included roles in the East-West and College All-Star games. Married. Born January 10, 1933.

Leon Clarke's Ram Pass Receiving Record

	No.	Yards	Long Pass	TD	Avg. Per Catch
1956	36	650	t60	4	18.1
1957	23	442	t70	4	19.2
Totals	59	1092	t70	8	18.5

Glenn Holtzman 6-3 254 27 4 No. Texas State

A chance assignment just before the final game of the 1957 season may have changed Holtzman's pro career. When injuries created a void at defensive end, Holtzman was switched from his regular offensive tackle position to fill in as a wingman. His performance was startling. Coach Sid Gillman called it "the best single game performance by a defensive end in the three years I've been here." Established as a proficient tackle, Holtzman is determined to succeed at his new position. He's a natural for it, with the size that is becoming more and more of a requirement for a modern defensive end. Holtzman was the only rookie lineman to make the team in '55. He played college football at Kilgore (Texas) Junior College and at North Texas State. Single. Born, October 9, 1930.

Lamar Lundy 6-7 235 23 2 Purdue

After a full season with the Rams, Lundy still is in the rare category of men who are NFL calibre at end both on offense and defense. He was drafted primarily as a defensive player, but was pressed into service as a receiver in '57 when an injury forced Leon Clarke out of action. His giant frame was well utilized in the rugged blocking requirements of a slot-back, and his pass receiving brought touchdowns on three of his six receptions. As co-captain at Purdue, he logged more playing time than any teammate in both his junior and senior years, and his awards as most valuable player of both basketball and football teams rates him among the top all-time athletes in Purdue history.

Paul Miller 6-2 220 27 5 Louisiana State

Pound for pound, Paul Miller might well be called the most rugged defensive end in pro football. Joining the Rams in 1954, Miller was a raw rookie who managed to break into the lineup for a few moments here and there. But his play improved so constantly that at the end of the 1956 season he was named to play in the Pro Bowl game. Perhaps his best performance came in the final moments of a game in 1955 against the Lions. With Bobby Layne electing to carry twice from the Ram 12 on third and two, Miller stopped him cold both times, preserving the Rams' seven point lead, and the chance for the division title they later won. At L.S.U., Miller had an outstanding track and boxing record, in addition to his three years as a grid letterman. Married. Born, November 8, 1930.

Gene Mitcham 6-2 206 26 1 Ariz. St. (Temp.)

One of the surprises of the 1957 Ram training camp, Mitcham was on the verge of making the squad in his rookie year until a muscle injury just before the start of the league season kept him out of action. He was placed on the reserve list and will report again this summer. Caught three touchdown passes in the Chicago Cardinal pre-season game in Portland. In his six pre-season appearances nabbed a total of nine passes for 153 yards—an average of over 17 yards per pass. Doesn't have blazing speed but possesses a fine pair of hands and normally hangs on to balls he can reach. Was an all-around player at Arizona State, working in backfield as well as at end. Earned four letters while at Arizona State and was Border Conference's Most Valuable Player in 1956.

Jim Phillips 6-1 199 21 1 Auburn

Although Auburn minimized passing and majored in a crushing ground game while compiling a 25-4-1 record during Big Red's three varsity seasons, Phillips nonetheless caught touchdown passes of 71 and 67 yards in 1956 and added TD catches of 71 and 63 yards last season. His over-all play—his defense work equalled his offensive performance—was sufficiently high to gain him "Best End" honors in the SEC for three consecutive years and resulted last season in the nomination to 18 All-American teams. Selected for 1958 College All-Star squad.

Billy Ray Smith 6-4 225 23 2 Arkansas

In the first 1957 scrimmage at Redlands, Coach Sid Gillman installed rookie Billy Ray Smith at defensive right end. His performance was so good that Gillman made this assignment a habit. Smith started all 19 games played by the Rams in '57. Rugged and agile, he warded off injuries as successfully as he warded off blockers. An All-Conference gridder at Arkansas, Smith also built up a national reputation as a collegiate boxer, going to the NCAA semi-finals in '57 and finals in '56, losing both times to the ultimate champ. In the Golden Gloves finals, he fought Pete Rademacher in Chicago. Married.

Clint Westemeyer 6-1 210 25 1 St. Ambrose

One of the top receivers among the country's small college players, Westemeyer finished fourth in the 1957 national standings and third in 1956 while setting both individual game and career pass catching records at St. Ambrose. Named to the Associated Press Little All American squad and to several Catholic All American teams. Named by his teammates as the squad's Most Valuable Player and co-captain in both his junior and senior years. While in the service at Fort Lewis (Wash.) played for Les Richter on the fort team and was recommended to the Rams by the veteran linebacker. In 1956 caught 10 passes in one game against Omaha University. Also a strong defensive wingman but lack of size probably will preclude his use defensively in professional football.

TACKLES

John Baker 6-6½ 290 22 1 N. Carolina Col.

Largest man ever to draw a Ram uniform and one of the biggest in NFL history, this huge rookie will be shooting for a defensive tackle spot. Despite his awesome size, John is agile and possesses good straight away speed. Twice named to the Negro All American team the new Ram defensive tackle candidate is a converted fullback, playing at that position in his freshman and sophomore years. Baker's nickname, quite naturally, is "Little John." Selected for 1958 College All-Star squad.

Charles Bradshaw 6-6 240 22 1 Baylor

Still a growing boy, this giant Baylor tackle shows indications of weighing some 250 pounds in the next two years. Had speed to outrun many of the varsity backs on the Bear squad. His platinum hair has created nickname of "White Monster." Hails from Center, Texas, Del Shofner's home town and was a teammate of Shofner's in high school and at Baylor. Great initial charge and this plus good over-all speed, makes him a prime offensive tackle prospect. Excellent student with a major in geology. Outstanding college game was 1957 Sugar Bowl contest where he consistently rolled up Tennessee players on his side of line.

Bob Fry 6-4 238 27 4 Kentucky

Joining the Rams in 1953 at 225 pounds, Fry had to give away valuable weight to most of his opponents across the line. However, he made up in mobility what he lacked in weight. Possessed of as much speed as any offensive lineman in the NFL, Fry often made spectacular blocks downfield to further insure his acceptance as a rookie. Following two years in the service, Fry returned to the Rams 13 pounds heavier, which immediately improved his blocking at the line of scrimmage. Fry was a teammate of Frank Fuller at Kentucky, and they joined the Rams together. Lives in Cincinnati. Married. Born, November 11, 1930.

Frank Fuller 6-4 243 29 5 Kentucky

Though 1958 will mark Frank Fuller's sixth year of association with the Rams, actually it will mark only his second full season as an experienced NFL player. Joining the Rams in 1953, Fuller spent two years in the military service and in 1956 an injury cost him a full year of league play. Last season, Fuller was established as a regular defensive tackle, and he gave a fine, spirited performance. In the Green Bay game, just a week before the season ended, he was phenomenal as a pass rusher, getting raves from the press, teammates, opponents and his own coaches. In the off-season, Fuller wrestles professionally as "The Battering Ram." Among his opponents this past winter was San Francisco 49er lineman Leo Nomellini. In their match they wrestled to a surprising draw. Fuller, a product of the Bear Bryant school of line play, was a teammate of Ram Bob Fry at Kentucky, and joined the Rams with Fry. Single. Born, August 8, 1929.

Art Hauser 6-0 246 29 5 Xavier

In his early football days, Artie was a fullback, but to watch him perform as an interior defensive lineman, an observer would assume that he had always played tackle, and for many years. In his early days as a Ram, his determination caught the fancy of the powers-that-be, and his subsequent opportunities proved his ability. He played the important middle guard spot when the Rams used a five man line, and in the current style of defense he is back at his old defensive tackle spot. Art has tremendous strength in his arms and shoulders, and has the knack of tossing off his blockers quickly enough to continue on as a pass rusher. Married. Born, June 19, 1929.

Ken Panfil 6-6 268 27 3 Purdue

In a league where big men are the awesome rule, rather than the exception, Ken Panfil still looms as obviously one of the biggest. And not an ounce of his huge bulk is wasted. In the latter part of the 1957 season, he played his best football to date, and one of his biggest accomplishments came against Baltimore when he handled the NFL's best pass rusher, the Colt's Gino Marchetti, better than he was handled elsewhere all year. In his rookie year of 1956, Panfil served as a number one alternate for each tackle on both platoons, a tribute to his versatility. Opposition linemen no longer are surprised to see Ken bring an effectiveness off the bench on offense or defense. Single. Born, September 16, 1930.

George Strugar 6-5 258 23 2 Washington

As proof that huge men can be quick and agile, Strugar was a varsity basketball player his junior year at the University of Washington. This same mobility, combined with sheer ruggedness and stamina, made him one of the better rookie performers last year, until an injury in the Brown game put him out of commission for the season. The former All Coast defensive tackle gave fine support to the play of veterans Frank Fuller and Art Hauser. His ideal size, and his ability to handle it, give promise of providing Strugar with a bright Ram future. Single.

GUARDS

John Houser 6-3 237 22 2 Redlands

Free agent makes good, because he knew he would. That's just about the story of John Houser. Overlooked by the entire NFL in the 1957 draft, John confidently sold the Rams on the same idea on which he had sold himself . . . that he could make the team. And he did. A star at several positions in his college career, Houser has spent most of his Ram time as an offensive guard, though he is always a strong stand-by for the center spot. Like Tank Younger, Bob Boyd and Don Burroughs before him, Houser serves as the Ram's latest reminder that the free agent field can contain real talent. Single. Born, June 21, 1935.

Alex (Buck) Lansford 6-2 235 24 4 Texas

Durability is the word for Buck. Throughout his entire collegiate career he started every one of his team's games, and in three full seasons (54 games) he started every game played by the Philadelphia Eagles, from whence he comes to the Rams in the Norm Van Brocklin trade. One of the finest blockers ever to play in the southwest, Lansford carried those same techniques into immediate NFL recognition. In fact, he made the Pro Bowl in 1957. Originally, the Eagles used him at tackle, later switching him to guard, where he'll probably spend most of his time as a Ram. Single. Born, November 4, 1933.

Duane Putnam 6-0 231 29 7 Col. of Pacific

Few players in the history of the NFL have earned and received as much respect from their opponents as has Duane Putnam. The oft-told story of his weight-lifting program, which increased his weight from 193 (at the end of his rookie season) to its present 231 is one of the finest examples of an athlete's self-discipline and determination. Since attaining "full size" Putnam has spent five devastating years leading Ram ball carriers downfield from his pulling guard spot. His All-Pro and Pro Bowl recognition has been echoed warmly by his own coaches. Sid Gillman says, "Putter is the finest offensive guard in the business." Duane lettered three years in track at C.O.P., where he was an outstanding shot putter. Married. Born, September 5, 1928.

CENTERS AND LINEBACKERS

Dick Daugherty 6-1 223 29 6 Oregon

A regular starting player at six different positions. That's the history of Dick Daughterty, who played end, fullback and blocking back in high school and college, and with the Rams has spent a full season or more at offensive guard, center and linebacker. But this by no means indicates that, as a jack of all trades, he's the master of none. Quite to the contrary, Daugherty's play has been steady and dependable at all times. Last year he was moved out of the line because it was felt he had undue pressure in exchanging techniques with opponents across the line who outweighed him by some 20 pounds or often more. As a backer, his play was as important and effective as his previous work "up front." He captained the 1950 Oregon team, gaining second team All-Coast honors. Among his offseason interests he sells investment securities. Married. Born March 29, 1930.

Bob Griffin 6-3 251 29 6 Arkansas

Entering his sixth season with the Rams, Griffin orginally joined the team at the tail end of a season, with just two games remaining. Was inserted into the lineup and made the club as a linebacker. Had been an All-American center at the University of Arkansas and a member of the 1952 College All Star squad. Was an All Service player while with the San Diego Marine Recruit Depot team in 1952 and Camp Pendleton during the early part of the 1953 season. Returned to the center spot in 1957 in a switch with Dick Daugherty, wha had been at center in previous years. Was Ram's second draft choice in 1952. Married. Born, February 12, 1929.

Bill Jobko 6-2 230 22 1 Ohio State

It's said that no one knows the ability of a football player better than his own teammates. Hence it was significant and pleasing to the Rams when the Ohio State varsity in effect seconded LA's enthusiasm toward this rugged performer by naming him the squad's Most Valuable Player for the 1957 season. The award was of more than passing interest since Aurelius Thomas, Jobko's running mate at guard, received almost unanimous All American mention, and sophomore fullback Bob White was a late season phenomenon. Described by Cleveland coach Paul Brown as a "potential Joe Schmidt," Bill is a top linebacker as well as a fine offensive blocker. A standout on pass defense, Jobko's agility enables him to cover well in the flat and he also has the speed to take a receiver in the deep hooking zone. Weighed 188 as a sophomore but has added weight steadily and probably will report to the Ram camp at 230. Will be positioned as a linebacker. Selected for 1958 College All-Star squad.

Lou Michaels 6-2 238 21 1 Kentucky

Undoubtedly last season's most publicized collegiate lineman, Michaels is more than a "magazine" All-American although he was named to no less than 19 such teams last fall. He is recognized in the rugged Southeastern Conference as one of the top half-dozen linemen to perform there in the past decade.

Michaels, who is a 40 yard-plus left footed punter, a consistently long kick-off man and virtually an automatic machine on conversions, was the oustanding lineman for the East in the 1957 San Francisco Shrine classic, but passed up an invitation to the Senior Bowl to be on hand in the nation's capital to receive that city's Lineman of the Year award presented by the Touchdown Club.

The number one draft choice of the Rams in the 1958 draft meeting, Lou will be moved to the linebacking position to take advantage of his exceptional mobility, speed and balance. Selected for 1958 College All-Star squad.

Larry Morris 6-2 220 24 4 Georgia Tech

Coach Sid Gillman calls Morris "truly a first draft choice in every sense of the word." Joining the Rams in 1955 as the top selection of the year, Morris immediately established himself as a stalwart linebacker. Then, when injuries depleted the fullback ranks, Morris stepped into that spot for five games, and, with little time for preparation, he played it like a veteran. He had not played the position since his freshman year at Georgia Tech. Injuries have hampered his career on several occasions, but a sound Larry Morris is top-flight insurance in the linebacker spot. Lettered four years in football and three in baseball at Georgia Tech and captained both teams. A strong tackler and at Tech was known as the Brahma Bull. Married. Born, December 10, 1933.

John Morrow 6-3 235 24 2 Michigan

A big surprise in the draft . . . he was selected on the 28th round . . . John Morrow played both guard and center as a rookie in 1956. After showing a real proficiency at guard, he was switched to center where he finished the season as the starting ball snapper. At the end of the season, Coach Sid Gillman called him "the most improving player on the team." In 1957, John was in the military service where he continued to polish his play in preparation for his return to the Rams. Has a brother, Gordon, who plays for the same University of Michigan eleven, and who also has been drafted by the Rams (as a future). He was selected in the 1958 draft, for sentimental reasons, on the same "magic" 28th round.

Clancy Osborne 6-3 207 23 1 Ariz. St. (Tempe)

An outstanding end with Arizona State for three seasons, Osborne was used exclusively on the defensive platoon in the East West game and did such an outstanding job of tackling that the Rams have decided to position him as a linebacker. He can do an adequate job at this spot whereas the lack of weight would handicap him at defensive end. Also has worked at the slotback spot.

Jack Pardee 6-2 212 22 2 Texas A & M

His first-year play with the Rams was highlighted by his "special team" work. As an unusually speedy man for a 200-pounder, Pardee many times was the first man down under kickoffs, making vicious tackles before the ball carrier could get going behind his interference. In addition, Pardee's fine tackling lent authority to his work as a linebacker. Played six man football at Christoval (Texas) High School, and at Texas A & M was called by Coach Bear Bryant, "the best linebacker I've ever coached." Played five positions (ends, halfbacks and fullback) as a soph, but then settled at fullback. Made the LOOK All-American team in 1956. All Southwest Conference for two years. Capped a fine college career by running back two kickoffs for touchdowns against Texas to lead Aggies to first win over Longhorns at Austin since 1924.

Les Richter 6-3 248 27 5 California

First made startling pro football history when eleven players were traded to Dallas to get Richter to the Rams in 1952. Joined the Rams in 1954 after serving two years in the army, where he coached the Fort Lewis, Washington, football team. Was a standout fullback at Fresno High School. Was switched to guard at California, and made virtually every All-American team both his junior and senior years. Valedictorian at Cal. Began with the Rams as a linebacker and offensive guard, then played mostly at the linebacker spot, and in the last part of '56 and throughout '57 played in and out of the line as middle guard. Has been a clutch field goal kicker throughout his playing days, including a 36 out of 38 PAT mark with the Rams in 1956. Also kicked eight field goals that year for a total of 60 points. A vicious tackler with fine speed, his open field tackles on kick returns have made him especially feared. Calls defensive signals. Married. Born, October 26, 1930.

QUARTERBACKS

Bobby Cox 6-0 196 24 1 Minnesota

After a brilliant high school career at Walla Walla, Wash., where he was an all state performer in football, basketball and track (and generally conceded to be the best all around athlete to be produced in the state in a dozen years), Cox enrolled at Washington. He was the regular quarterback for the Huskies as a sophomore in 1954, transferring to Minnesota at the close of that season. The transfer rule kept him out of competition in 1955. He was the offense leader at Minnesota in both 1956 and 1957.

The Gopher's Split-T attack precluded much passing on Cox's part but his one year stint at Washington under a conventional T system indicated an ability to throw the long pass with accuracy. His three touchdown passes against UCLA that season nearly upset the Bruins (20-21) who were, at that time, the nation's number 1 team.

Frank Ryan 6-3 197 22 1 Rice

This slender passing wizard could well develop as the surprise pick of the 1958 draft. Like the other clubs in the league, the Rams were concerned about selecting Ryan because of his expressed interest in pursuing his nuclear physics studies with a master's and PhD degree in mind. Ram officials decided, however, that perhaps a program could be worked out which would enable Ryan to work toward his advance degrees while playing football and the club was able to develop such a schedule for Frank with the result that he will be one of the three quarterbacks in camp this summer.

Although King Hill (Cardinal bonus pick) received the bulk of the Rice quarterbacking publicity during the 1957 season, there are many football experts in the Southwest who believe that Ryan will develop into the better professional quarterback of the two. Frank probably is not as strong an all-around football player as his teammate, but is an exceptional passer as his performance in the second half of the 1958 Cotton Bowl attests to. With Rice trailing badly at half time, Ryan played the entire second stanza, completing 13 of 22 passes. He engineered one touchdown drive and had the Owls on the Navy three yard line when the game ended. His status as an honor student at the academically tough Rice Institute indicates his mental capacity to absorb the complex professional football offensive attack.

Bill Wade 6-2 203 27 5 Vanderbilt

With four seasons of NFL football under his belt, Wade has been a starter only during one season . . . part of 1956. In that year he responded by finishing second among all the NFL passers, directing the Rams to victories over Philadelphia and the 49ers—half the teams' four victories for that season. In another game that season, rallied the team from an 0-17 deficit to a much narrower 3-point ultimate loss on the strength of three touchdown passes. In 1954, his first season with the Rams, he preserved a Ram one point margin over the Giants in New York by running out the clock for six and a half minutes, the game ending with the Rams still in possession after a march nearly the length of the field. Wade was the Rams' bonus choice in 1952 after a four letter football career at Vanderbilt, where he won virtually every campus and football honor in the south. He played in the North-South, Senior Bowl and College All Star games. His father, W. J. Wade, Sr., captained the 1921 undefeated Vanderbilt team. Billy's ability to run with the ball has been compared to that of many halfbacks, and this talent gives the Rams their first running quarterback in many years. Married. Born, October 4, 1930.

HALFBACKS

Jon Arnett 5-11 194 23 2 So. California

Jon Arnett was on the spot, as is any star collegian drafted by the pro team in the city of his own collegiate stardom. But in 1957, his rookie year in the NFL, he not only lived up to the requirements of the fans who were expecting much of him . . . he also more than satisfied the coaches who had made him the number one selection in the '57 draft. In the pre-season workouts, he was placed at end to sharpen his receiving ability (though he had been a star running back at S. C.) When an injury to Elroy Hirsch and other ends handicapped the quarterbacks in the exhibition games, Arnett was asked to play the end position. He performed so well that he stayed there part way through the league season. When the ends were at full strength again, he returned to halfback where he was equally as brilliant. He gained 322 yards receiving and 347 running for a total of 669 yards in scrimmage plays, plus a league leading 28.0 average in 18 kickoff returns, including a 98-yard TD jaunt against the Bears. In college he was a track star as well as one of the top open field runners in Trojan history. In 1958 the plan is to play him in a combination split-end and backfield position. Single.

Alex Bravo 6-0 189 27 2 Cal. Poly

One of the fastest and greatest offensive backs in the history of Cal Poly, Bravo came to the Rams after a year in Canada to make his mark as a defensive back. Playing a corner spot, Bravo's most sensational performance, ironically, came in a game in which an opposing offensive player set an all-time league record against the Rams. In the Cleveland game, Jim Brown set the NFL single game ground gaining record against the Rams, and scored four touchdowns. But twice more while en route to pay dirt, Brown had to give way to Bravo's speed as Alex dragged him down from behind. In college Bravo ran the 100 in 9.7 and the 220 in 21.2. He was honorable mention Little All-American in his senior year. Married. Born, July 27, 1930.

Don Burroughs 6-4 186 27 4 Colorado A & M

His teammates call him "The Blade," in obvious reference to his stringbean stature. Built unlike the basic rugged physique looked for in grid stars, Burroughs defies the rule of thumb by exhibiting a remarkable talent for making vicious, sure tackles. Combined with this, his height and agility enable him to play the ball well as a pass defender. He makes his home in Los Angeles, but his school was Colorado A & M which has sent many stars to the NFL, including Thurman McGraw, Jim David, Gary Glick, and Dale Dodrill. He was a quarterback in college, but at his own request, when signed as a free agent, he was switched to defense when he first joined the Rams. He has been a fixture as a "deep" man ever since. He intercepted three passses in his first league game, and finished up his first season with nine. In the off-season, he works as a public relations man for the Falstaff Brewing Corporation. Single. Born, August 19, 1931.

Jim Harris 6-1 176 23 2 Oklahoma

As the number one quarterback for the University of Oklahoma Sooners, Harris may be the only player in history to be the first string quarterback on two successive national championship collegiate teams. Showed so well as a defensive player that he was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles as a safety man. Played one year with the Eagles, as a first stringer, and then came to the Rams along with Buck Lansford in the trade for Norman Van Brocklin. His size places him in the lightweight class of Detroit's Jim David, but like David his great reactions and his speed make up for it in smooth performances.

Floyd Iglehart 6-4 197 23 1 Wiley

An amazingly versatile performer, Iglehart played two years of offensive end at Wiley and completed his competition last season as the first string quarterback. All three years, however, he was the team's top defensive man in the secondary, the position at which he will be stationed with the Rams. A :10.0s sprinter, Floyd has the speed to cover NFL receivers deep. He likewise is a strong tackler. Also a varsity basketball player, Iglehart possesses tremendous spring in his legs which should prove to be a valuable asset to him on pass defense. Intercepted 11 passes in 1957, running two of them back for touchdowns.

Jim Jones 6-1 200 22 1 Washington

Jones, a large back in collegiate circles, possesses excellent speed, turning in a :10.1s century when he ran with the Washington freshman track team. Basically a power runner, he has the necessary burst of speed to produce the long run as attested to by his 91 yard kick-off return against Minnesota and a 61 yard ramble with an intercepted pass against UCLA. He ranked fourth in the nation in kick-off returns in 1957.

A tremendous tackler, Jones played a floating linebacking position for the Huskies last year and was in on fully half of his team's tackles. Was equally effective at that position in the East-West game.

Captain-elect of his team, Jones also was named AP Back-of-the-Week after leading Washington to an upset win last season over Oregon State, defending Pacific Coast Conference champions. He ranks third among the all-time Washington ground gainers. Selected for 1958 College All-Star squad.

K. C. Jones 6-1 203 26 1 San Francisco

Although he didn't play football in college, Jones was internationally famous as a basketball star, playing alongside of Bill Russell both at the University of San Francisco and in subsequent cage activity. Jones was named the outstanding basketball player of the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne. Although his basketball contract is owned by the Boston Celtics, Jones has chosen to give pro football his best shot, since he showed great grid potential in high school. He was drafted on the 30th round in 1955 on the speculation that he would want to try football at some future time. His basketball agility and speed make him a natural candidate for a defensive backfield spot.

Ed Kelley 6-2 197 25 1 Texas

1958 finds Ed Kelley, at long last, making his rookie bid for a defensive halfback spot in pro football. The Rams drafted him as a "future" in 1955, but subsequent military service and a return to college football delayed his reporting to the Rams. Kelley is considered one of the finest defensive backs ever to play football at the University of Texas. He was a track star, further attesting to his potential football speed.

Jack Morris 6-0 194 26 1 Oregon

Drafted by the Rams in 1956 although he still had two years of college eligibility remaining. Played freshman football at Oregon, then put in a four year hitch in the Army before returning to school in 1955. Regular fullback with the Webfoots for three seasons, and co-captain of last year's Rose Bowl squad. Rams plan to use as a defensive halfback with possible secondary duties as a ball carrier. Gained over 200 yards on the ground last season against USC. Placed sixth in the 1957 NCAA low hurdles and is a consistent :09.8s sprinter in the century. Fastest rookie in Ram camp, running 50 yards in 5.75 in full football gear.

Jimmy Orr 6-0 190 22 1 Georgia

A small but nifty package, Orr's reactions and ball hawk characteristics make him a defensive halfback candidate. Led the Southeastern Conference in pass receiving as a sophomore in 1955 and again last season as a senior, edging Jim Phillips by a single reception for the honor. Starting halfback for the South in the Blue-Gray game and turned in a fine receiving performance. Also excellent punt and kick-off man, and is an excellent punter.

Will Sherman 6-2 197 28 5 St. Mary's

One of the outstanding examples of versatility in recent Ram history, Sherman plays safety for the very simple reason: He's good at it. But his proven sample of end plays against NFL competition in his rookie year still rings bells and brings smiles to Rams who remember it. Needed on defense, he was assigned to safety and in his first three years as a Ram he intercepted a total of 21 passes. In 1955, his mark of eleven led the league . . . and three more were nullified by penalties. Was elected co-captain of the Rams before the 1957 season. After outstanding collegiate performances in both baseball and football, he signed to play with the Sacramento Solons in the Pacific Coast League, but a shoulder injury forced him to give up baseball for the moment. He turned to pro football and first played with the Dallas Texans in 1952. He moved to Calgary in 1953, and then was signed by the Rams as a free agent in 1954. Married.

Del Shofner 6-3 185 22 2 Baylor

Like Will Sherman, Del Shofner has pro football specialties on both offense and defense. In his rookie year, 1957, he was used as a defensive halfback, playing at the corner spot where his speed and agility made him a most effective performer. With the need for NFL-experienced players at offensive end positions in 1958, Shofner was moved to the offensive platoon. Shofner came to the Rams with the reputation of versatility. At Baylor in 1956 he lead the team in rushing, scoring, punting, pass interceptions, punt and kickoff returns and receiving . . . every department of the game except passing. Del was a 9.8 sprinter in track and was a three year forward on the varsity basketball team. Voted the most outstaning player in the 1957 Sugar Bowl game. Single.

Clendon Thomas 6-2 191 21 1 Oklahoma

"Mr. Versatile" of 1957 college football, Thomas set new Oklahoma career records in touchdowns (36) and yards gained (2,122) as he led the Sooners to the Big Eight championship and an Orange Bowl invitation.

While Clendon's achievements at Oklahoma attest to his ball carrying ability, the Ram left halfback post already is well populated with Tom Wilson, Ron Waller and Jon Arnett which indicates a primary assignment for him as a defensive halfback with secondary duties as a running back. A slashing breakaway and long-striding runner, Thomas was equally at home on defense, coming up fast to support the running game as well as defending well against the pass. Led the nation in scoring in 1956 and had another great year last season despite the label of a "marked man" in every game. This, coupled with the fact that his supporting cast in 1957 did not match the calibre of the previous year's, made his 6.3 yard per carry average more remarkable.

Attesting to his all-around ability, Thomas last year averaged 24.5 yards per punt return on seven chances, punted for a 38 yard average on 37 boots, completed five passes and returned four kickoffs for 87 yards.

Thomas is single and a leader in the national Fellowship of Christian Athletes program. He is a mechanical engineering major selected for 1958 College All-Star squad.

Alonzo Vereen 5-11½ 190 25 1 Florida A & M

A power runner with good outside speed and is a fine pass receiver. Gets off fast and has good balance. Played end his sophomore year but shifted to the backfield for his final two seasons. From the same school that turned out Willie Galimore of the Chicago Bears.

Ron Waller 5-11 179 25 4 Maryland

When Waller set an all-time Ram rookie record by gaining 716 yards in his first season (1955), he merely was setting the stage for a steady career as one of the NFL's most dependable running backs. In spite of injuries that hampered him in the latter part of '56 and during portions of the '57 season, Waller rates high in the all-time list of Ram career ground gainers with 1551 yards in just 3 seasons. In '57, his 6.1 average yards gained per carry topped all NFL backs who carried 48 times or more. His average in '56 was an outstanding 6.5. His amazing performances in 1955 won him All-Pro honors as a rookie. In college, he was an All-Conference player and an honorable mention All-American. Also played lacrosse on Maryland's national championship team following a nationally rated top season in football. Thus he became the only athlete in Maryland history to be a member of two national championship teams, football in '53 and lacrosse in '54. Before that, he set a Delaware prep school record by scoring 213 points in his senior year on 30 TDs and 33 PATs. Married to the granddaughter of Mrs. Merriweather Post — Post Toasties heiress. Born, February 14, 1933.

Tom Wilson 6-0 204 25 3 No College

A sensational debut in 1956 was followed by a fine sophomore year in 1957 to give Tom Wilson, after just two years of play, a right to be classed as a potential all-time Ram great. Signed as a free agent, and with no collegiate football experience (though he starred in service ball), Wilson became an overnight top-rated NFL halfback. In his first year, he set an all-time NFL mark (since erased by Jim Brown) by gaining 223 yards in the season finale against the Packers. His kickoff return against the Colts for 103 yards was the season topper and one of the NFL's all-time best. Played one year of baseball (he was a catcher) in the Braves' farm system. Scored 44 TDs while playing service football, to acquire the usual cross-handed grip. Is strong enough at 204 pounds to play fullback when called upon. At Hillside High School in Durham, North Carolina, he played baseball and football with Wes Covington (Milwaukee Braves). Married. Born, September 1, 1933.

FULLBACKS

Paige Cothren 5-11 195 22 2 Mississippi

Last year, Cothren's duties during the regular season were limited to place kicking, but his success in that department was vital to the Ram offensive cause. In his rookie year, his record of 38 successful extra points in 39 tries fell short of the 100% category only because of a bad pass from center which led to his only miss. In 19 field goal tries, many of them under pressure and at long distances, Paige made 11 of them, including three (and one of them a 44-yarder) in the season closer at the Coliseum. His 71 points led the team in scoring and was the Ram high since the days of Bob Waterfield. In college football, with the goal post ten yards farther from the kicker, Cothren showed his potential by kicking three field goals against Vanderbilt in one game (34, 35 and 42 yards). Cothren also was an outstanding ball carrier at Mississippi. Following his first year concentration on place kicking only, Cothren has been working with the offensive backfield and will serve as a proven standby at the fullback position. Cothren is a nephew of Barney and Ray Poole, former professional football stars.

Joe Marconi 6-2 230 24 3 West Virginia

Like Larry Morris the year before and Del Shofner and Jon Arnett the following year, Joe Marconi lived up to his status as the Ram's first round draft choice in 1956. With seven touchdowns, he led all Ram ball carriers in point production as a rookie, and came right back in 1957 to enjoy a strong sophomore year. In just two years, he has rolled up 779 yards from scrimmage. Also adept at pass receiving, Marconi was on the receiving ends of swing and screen passes for a 1957 total of 171 yards. Marconi has ideal size for a fullback, and his speed and power are aided by a shiftiness which would be expected of a halfback. Marconi is a dependable man for the clutch yardage in the fine traditions of his predecessors Towler, Hoerner and Younger. He was a four letter man at West Virginia, and was All Southern Conference in 1954. Single. Born, February 6, 1934.

The Owners

DANIEL F. REEVES

President

Daniel F. Reeves purchased the Cleveland Rams of the National Football league in 1941 at the age of 28 after competing in athletics at Newman Prep and graduating from Georgetown University.

Shortly after obtaining the Ram franchise, Reeves entered the Army Air Corps and served for three years before his release as a captain in 1945. He saw the Rams of 1945 win the world professional football title and then became the forerunner of major sports' invasion of the Pacific Coast by moving the Rams to Los Angeles in 1946.

Reeves, 46, operates a successful stock brokerage business in Southern California, is married and the father of five daughters and one son.

EDWIN W. PAULEY

Edwin W. Pauley, 55, conducts a wide range of well established business enterprises, the most notable of which are oil interests throughout the world. He is a member of the Board of Regents of the University of California and active in civic and political endeavors on a city, state and national level. Raised in Pasadena, Pauley attended Occidental College and University of California, competing in both football and crew. He is married and has three sons and one daughter.

FRED LEVY, JR.

Fred Levy, Jr., a graduate of University of Pennsylvania, was a partner with Reeves in the original purchase of the Ram franchise in 1941. He served as a Colonel in the Air Force during World War II and accompanied the Rams on their move to Southern California in 1946. Born in Louisville, Kentucky on April 8, 1902, Levy operates varied businesses in Los Angeles, principally real estate. He is married and has two daughters.

JAMES "HAL" SELEY

James H. Seley founded the Pacific Processing Co., a vitamin processing plant of which he is president. He is also associated with a number of other business interests, including a stock brokerage, and has a large stable of race horses and his own breeding farm in Hemet, California. Mr. Seley's Trackmaster won the classic Santa Anita Maturity in 1956. Born at Conneaut Lake, Penn., April 19, 1906, he still spends part of the year at a farm he owns in Pennsylvania although he, his wife and son and daughter make their permanent home in San Marino, California.

The Rams Story--1937-57

1937 On February 13 National Football League grants a Cleveland franchise to Homer Marshman representing a prominent group of local businessmen.
Coached by Hugo Bezdek, former Penn State great, team wins but one game in first year.

1938 Assistant coach Art Lewis takes over ball club after three losses and team wins three of remaining seven games.

1939 Earl "Dutch" Clark replaces Art Lewis as coach. Lewis remains as assistant. Rams win five, lose five to hit .500 for first time.
Parker Hall joins team and is voted League's most valuable player.

1940 Team drops back to 4-6-1 record.

1941 Daniel F. Reeves and Fred Levy, Jr., purchase Cleveland in June and hire Billy Evans, former sports columnist, American League umpire and general manager of Cleveland Indians as team's General Manager.
Team wins first two games, then drops last nine to finish in league cellar. Evans resigns before start of 1942 season.

1942 Charles "Chile" Walsh replaces Art Lewis as Assistant Coach and radio announcer Bob Kelley is named club secretary. Lieutenant Reeves and Major Levy depart to join armed forces. Team loses six games while winning five.

1943 Chile Walsh named head coach when Clark resigns, but team is given permission to suspend operations for one season.
Levy sells his interest in the Rams to Reeves.

1944 Walsh named General Manager. He in turn appoints Aldo "Buff" Donelli as head coach. Pick-up team wins four, loses six.

1945 Donelli joins service prior to beginning of season. Walsh appoints brother Adam as new head coach. George Trafton signs to coach line and Bob Snyder returns to old team as backfield mentor. Bob Waterfield, a rookie from UCLA, joins squad.
Rams have unprecedented season, winning nine while losing one and defeat Washington Redskins by 15-14 score on frozen field to annex world's championship. Waterfield named League's most valuable player, Walsh voted Coach of the Year.

1946 Reeves moves franchise from Cleveland to Los Angeles. Team fails to repeat division title and both Walshes resign. Reeves assumes duties as general manager, Bob Snyder appointed head coach for '47, with Joe Stydahar named as assistant.

1947 Edwin and Harold Pauley along with Fred Levy purchase interests in the Rams. Injuries play big part in disappointing 6-6 record.

1948 Clark Shaughnessy joins staff as advisory coach during winter months. Appointed head coach on September 3 when Snyder resigns. Team wins four of last five games to post season mark of 6-5-1.

1949 Team wins first six games and protects lead to produce first Western Division championship. NFL championship is lost to Philadelphia by 14-0 score in rain at Los Angeles.

1950 NFL and AAC merge. Rams remain as lone pro team in L.A. Stydahar named head coach in February, appointing Mel Hein and Hamp Pool as assistants. Office moves to 7813 Beverly Blvd. Team sets 22 league records, wins conference title over Bears in play-off, but loses to Browns, 30-28, on last minute Groza field goal, for NFL title.

Rams win National Conference championship on final day of league season, then defeat Cleveland 24-17 for team's second world championship.

1952 Stydahar resigns after team loses three straight pre-season games and conference opener. Hampton Pool appointed head coach. Rams rally to win last eight league games and climb from cellar to divisional tie with Detroit. Lions win play-off. Ray Richards resigns to accept Baltimore coaching post. Pool hires two new aides, John Sauer, backfield coach, and Bill Battles, line coach.

1953 Team compiles 8-3-1 record, losing three games by total of eight points. Although finishing third in Western Division, Rams defeat world champion Lions in two league games.
Pool adds assistants Dick Voris and Ralph Weaver to staff.

1954 Team has inconsistent season to finish with a 6-5-1 mark, trailing Lions, Bears and 49ers in Conference standings. Entire staff of assistants resign at close of year and Pool follows suit shortly after.

1955 On January 26, Sid Gillman, University of Cincinnati mentor, hired as head coach after intensive search of coaching ranks by Ram executives. Gillman names Joe Madro, Jack Faulker, Lowell Storm and Joe Thomas as assistants.
Rams win 8, lose 3, tie 1 to win Western Conference title by half game over Bears. Championship gives Rams four Conference titles, one World Championship in last seven years.

1956 Rams finish in tie for last, lowest standing since coming to L.A. Five straight defeats in early season proved club's longest all-time losing streak.

1957 George Allen added to coaching staff. Team loses squeakers on road vs. 49ers and Lions, for season 6 and 6 record, finishing two games behind division leaders.

1957—"Longest"—Performances

BALL CARRYING

Ron Waller, for the third straight season, claimed the longest run from scrimmage. On the next to the last play of the second Green Bay game, Waller broke through the right side at the Ram 20 and was hauled down on the Packer four. It was the longest Ram run from scrimmage since 1951.

FORWARD PASSING

In the opening moments of the second half of the first 49er game, Norm Van Brocklin faded back from the Ram 30 and found Leon Clarke open at midfield. Clarke eluded Bill Stits and outran the rest of the 49er secondary for a 70-yard TD, the season's longest Ram pass play.

SCORING

Paige Cothren's 11 field goals and 38 out of 39 successful extra point attempts gave him 71 points, the highest Ram total since Bob Waterfield's 83 points in 1952.

1957 Ram Attendance

Highlighted by an all-time record breaking crowd of 102,368 for the 49er game at the Coliseum on November 10th, the Rams again last season proved to be the "drawingest" team in the National Football League.

The figures shown here represent not only all-time Ram attendance marks, but also represent the NFL records in all categories:

Season Attendance	1,051,106	1957	19 games
Home Attendance	711,924	1957	10 games
Home League Game Attendance	445,776	1957	6 games
One Game Attendance	102,368	1957	Rams-49ers
Average Home Attendance	71,192	1957	10 games
Average Home League Attendance	74,296	1957	6 games

In addition to the 49er Coliseum game, the Rams played to sell out crowds in San Francisco, Detroit and Chicago (vs. Bears). The game in Cleveland drew a five year high attendance and the game in Baltimore produced an all-time pro high figure for that city.

Outlook

fullback. Leon Clarke, Jon Arnett and Lamar Lundy are effective receivers and should be adequately supported by Phillips, Shofner and Gene Mitcham, who returns after a 1957 injury.

DEFENSE: Like a little boy, the Ram defense when good was very very good and when it was bad it was horrid. The men up front frequently held the opposition to less than 150 yards on the ground and the pass defense generally was adequate to good. On rare occasions when the break-through came, the defensive unit found it hard to stem the tide, resulting in substantial opponent yardage totals. Injuries to key personnel was a factor in some cases, mistakes by inexperienced personnel the reason for others. Over-all, the defense was improved over the previous season and figures to be again in 1958. Les Richter is one of the League's finest linebackers and the balance of the defensive line is above the league average. Pass defense — a thorny problem for all clubs — will be a major problem this year. However, with no less than eight rookie prospects reporting to compete for the remaining spots at this position, plus the addition of Jim Harris, it is felt that a cohesive defensive unti can be built in time for the league season.

1957 Games

At Baltimore: The Colts, with Unitas pitching and Moore, Ameche and Dupre carrying, scored touchdowns on sustained drives the first two times they had the ball. The Rams scored twice, on Van Brocklin's passes to Clarke and Hirsch (with a lateral to Wilson) and the game was tied 14-14 in the early moments of the second half. But a field goal and two late touchdowns gave the Colts the win before a new Colt home attendance record of 52,060 fans.

At Los Angeles: Three passes by Unitas in the first four plays of the game gave the Colts an early lead, but a 44-yard Cothren field goal and a 61-yard Van Brocklin to Arnett screen pass late in the first quarter put the Rams in front to stay. Van Brocklin's 328 yards gained in passes won him official NFL recognition for the season's outstanding one-game performance, in his final appearance as a Ram.

1957 Games

At Chicago: Rookie Willie Galimore carried the Bear banner for all four of his team's touchdowns in a spectacular performance. In 24 runing plays he rolled up 153 yards, and two pass receptions added 60 more to account for 213 of the Bears' 447 yards. His first touchdown jaunt of 18 yards came as he was trapped, fumbled, recovered the ball on the bounce and zigzagged for the most unusual touchdown of the year. The Rams outpassed the Bears, statistically, but couldn't stop Galimore. Final: 34-26.

At Los Angeles: The Rams' Jon Arnett ran the opening kick-off back for a 98-yard touchdown, the season's longest in the NFL. The Rams' first scrimmage series resulted in a Bear touchdown on Zucco's 48 year scoring jaunt with a Tom Wilson fumble. The next Ram possession resulted in a field goal, and mid-way through the first quarter it was 10-7 Rams. From there on, the Rams were blanked. Three George Blanda field goals provided the rest of the game's scoring. Final: 16-10 Bears.

At Portland: The Rams rolled up a fantastic average on 10.7 yards gained per scrimmage play . . . a total of 729 yards, plus 137 yards in returns of punts and kickoffs and 43 yards awarded on Cardinal penalties, a grand total of over 900 yards of net forward action. The final score in this pre-season encounter was 63-21, Rams.

Halfbacks Tom Wilson and Ron Waller got into the passing statistics with perfect results. Wilson's two passes were caught by Gene Mitcham for 55 yards and two touchdowns, and Waller's only toss was to Mitcham for 13 yards. Mitcham, Arizona State rookie, later lost for the season by injury, gained 139 yards on pass receptions, and the 26 total Ram passes resulted in 19 completions for 71.4% effectiveness. Wilson also rolled up an impressive 188 yards rushing.

But even this statistical bonanza didn't match the previous year's score of 69-21, Rams.

At Cleveland: Cleveland Rookie Jim Brown set an all-time NFL record for rushing yardage in a single game, 237, and four times he crossed the Ram goal for TDs. The Browns spent much of the game capitalizing on Rams errors. Of the six Brown TDs, four of them followed Brown possession of the ball obtained as follows: Two interceptions of Ram passes at midfield, a recovery of a Ram fumble on the Ram 7, and new life on a Ram offsides at midfield on a 4th down Cleveland punt. The latter came with the Rams leading by eleven points in the third quarter.

At Los Angeles: (Pre-season) Rolling up 403 yards to Cleveland's 286, the Rams came from behind in the second half to win a hard-fought Coliseum battle with Tom Wilson's 104 yards rushing leading the way. Rams 20, Browns, 14.

At Detroit: In the second quarter, a Van Brocklin to Arnett TD pass for 12 yards gave the Rams their only score of the game. Moments later Yale Lary's 63 yard return of an interception set up the Lions' only TD. It was one of six Lion interceptions in the game. A 47 yard Rote to Gedman pass two minutes later set up a Bobby Layne field goal to end the scoring for the day. Final: Lions, 10, Rams, 7.

At Los Angeles: The Rams scored touchdowns on their first three series of downs, all on sustained drives, and with Marconi, Waller, Wilson and Younger providing an evenly balanced rushing attack, the Rams maintained their lead throughout. Final: Rams 35, Lions 17.

At Milwaukee: The Packers scored on their first two possessions and went on to a 24-3 halftime lead. Remindful of a great comeback against the same team five years before, the Rams came back on the running of Arnett (including a 68 yard game tying run) and the passing of Van Brocklin to tie it in the 4th quarter at 24-24. After a Fred Cone field goal, the Rams won the game with moments remaining on a Van Brocklin-Lundy 34 yard pass play. Final: LA 31, GB 27.

At Los Angeles: An injury-riddled Packer team was no match for the smooth Ram offense, which chalked up 599 yards, evenly distributed between passing and running. Van Brocklin threw four TD passes (to Hirsch, Clarke, Lundy, Marconi) and Wade passed to Hirsch for the final TD. Final: LA 42, GB 17.

At Los Angeles: A pre-season crowd of 60,094 saw the Giants' Gifford, Webster and Triplett run almost at will over the Coliseum turf. The three backs split 241 yards almost evenly, averaging 5.6 yards a carry. From the outset, the Giants found success in the theory, "If we control the ball, you can't score." It was mid-way through the fourth quarter before a pass from Wade to Bob Boyd, good for eleven yards, gave the Rams their first and only score.

Two sparkling kickoff returns by Wilson and Arnett, each good for 51 yards, gave the fans thrills, but neither led to a score.

In league games, the Rams, since coming to Los Angeles, still have a perfect 5-0 record vs. the Giants.

About the Steelers

This is Buddy Parker's second year as head coach of the Steelers after six years with the Detroit Lions. In 1957, despite the fact that the Steelers trailed the pack in scoring, with just 161 points in contrast to the Rams' league leading figure of 307, the Steelers split twelve games. The difference was in the effectiveness of the Steelers' defenses. Parker's crew rated second to Cleveland in stinginess, allowing only 178 points. The Steelers led the NFL in permitting the fewest first downs (156), and also allowed the fewest net yards gained by opponents (2791).

Another Parker type "close to the vest" mark was chalked up by quarterback Earl Morrall, who led the league in avoiding interceptions, with a 4.2% mark. Jack McClairen was Morrall's favorite receiver in '57, catching 46 tosses, the league's third highest.

The Steelers' top rated players include runners Billy Wells and former Ram Tank Younger, defensive back Jack Butler, lineman Dale Dodrill, and rookies Larry Krutko, Bill Krisher and Aurelius Thomas.

1957 Games

At San Francisco: The Rams outgained and out first-downed the 49ers, but the "Alley-Oop" pass, with leaping basketball type jump catches by R. C. Owens, made the difference for the 49ers. In defiance of the defenders, who had perfect position, Owens went high in the air to bring down touchdown passes in the second and fourth quarters to add a spectacular new type play to the 49er offense. A 21-yard sweep by Tom Wilson and a 70-yard pass from Van Brocklin to Clarke gave the Rams two TDs, and Cothren's two FGs completed the Ram scoring. Final: SF 23, LA 20.

At Los Angeles: The largest attendance in NFL history, 102,368, saw the teams exchange early TDs on passes to Boyd and McElhenny, but late in the first quarter the Rams scored on a 74 yard drive to take the lead for keeps. Van Brocklin passed for 224 yards, including 117 carried by receiver Bob Boyd, for two Boyd TDs. Arnett, Marconi and Younger crossed the 49er goal line to climax three other Ram scoring drives. Final: LA 37, SF 24.

1957 Games

At Los Angeles: The Redskins started the scoring with a Dorow to Runnels TD pass, but moments later a Van Brocklin to Clarke pass was the first of five scoring tosses for the Dutchman that sparked a Ram revenge for the two previous years. Statistically, the Rams gained momentum as the game progressed, winding up with 493 net yards. Final: LA 45, Wash. 14.

At Mobile: Sam Baker's thirteen yard field goal gave the 'Skins a 3-0 first half lead. In the third quarter, the Rams took the lead on Arnett's 84-yard TD punt return, and in the same quarter Marconi burst through the middle for a 50-yard scoring jaunt. Basically, it was a defensive battle throughout, with the Rams gaining only 170 net yards. Final: LA 14, Wash. 3.
